Faculty Experts:
With smallpox vaccine trials in the news, the issue smallpox vaccine safety and whether you could test a new vaccine are starting to be discussed. The article I am writing on this topic is not ready for posting, but the slides from my talk might be interesting to some. You can view or download them at: biotech.law.umkc.edu/blaw/Bioterror.htm

Annotated Bibliography of Government Documents Related to the Threat of Terrorism and the Attacks of September 11, 2001 [.pdf]
http://www.odl.state.ok.us/usinfo/terrorism/911.htm
This impressive bibliography has been compiled by Kevin D. Motes (US Government Information Division, Oklahoma Department of Libraries). It focuses on the US federal documents on terrorism and most specifically on attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. All documents are described with concise annotations and available through the Federal Depository system. Many, if not most, of these publications are available via the Web. The materials are arranged alphabetically by title within each of the seven sections (Aftermath, Congressional and Presidential Actions, Global Terrorism, International Politics, National Security, US Foreign Relations, and Weapons of Mass Destruction). Although available in a very limited print version with a steep price (300 hundred copies with each costing $502.39!!!), this reviewer will be certain to bookmark this reference tool. One might hope for a comprehensive index perhaps in a future edition, but that is a relatively modest quibble. Anyone even moderately interested in the US response to terrorism will definitely find enough to keep himself/herself busy for a long, long time. [Scout Report]

Special Analysis: The War Against Terrorism

"The 21st Century began on September 11, 2001. In June 1914, the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand in Sarajevo precipitated the first war that would define the 20th Century. The attack of September 11 will be the precipitating moment of a new kind of war that will define a new century. This war will be fought in shadows, and the adversary will continue to target the innocent and defenseless." www.terrorism.com/index.html

CENTER FOR CIVILIAN BIODEFENSE STUDIES

From John Hopkins University, Schools of Medicine and Public Health, the Center for Civilian Biodefense Studies strives to "increase national and international awareness of the medical and public health threats posed by biological weapons, thereby augmenting the potential legal, political and moral prohibitions against their use".
FBI Wants Us to Participate

"The men and women of the FBI join the nation in expressing our deep sympathies for the victims of these horrific tragedies and their families. And we -- all of us in the FBI -- pledge to those directly affected by these attacks that we will leave no stone unturned in our quest to help find those responsible and to bring those individuals to justice."  Director Mueller, September 12, 2001
